Mr. J. Bateman has noticed the romantic use of orchids in those countries he is writing upon. He says: "In Mexico, where the 'language of flowers' is understood by all, the orchidacen seem to compose nearly the entire alphabet. Not an infant is baptized, not a marriage is celebrated, no obsequies performed at which the aid of these flowers is not called in by the sentimental natives to assist the expression of their feelings. They are offered by the devotee at the shrine of his favorite saint, by the lover at the feet of his mistress and by the serrowing survivor at the grave of his friend; whether, in short, on fast days or feast days, on occasions of rejoicing or in moments of distress, these flowers are sought for with an avidity which would seem to say that there was no sympathy like theirs; thus 'Flor de los Santos,' 'Flor de Corpus,' 'Flor de los muertos,' 'Flor de Maio,' 'No me olvides' (or forgetmenot) are but a few names out of the many that might be cited to prove the high consideration in which our favorites are held in the New World."

An Odd Experience. Queer things happen when New Yorkers visit Brooklyn. Two young women crossed the bridge last week to visit a friend on Columbia heights. They walked back to the bridge entrance, and, perfectly sure they knew what they were doing bought their tickets and settled themselves in a train on the Kings County Elevated road. They talked away incessantly, unmindful of stops, until it suddenly occurred to them that they "must be nearly across." They looked out on the green fields of East New York, and disgust was written deep on their faces as they made their way back to the city.-New York Times.
